Orchids

We have been collecting orchids from Whole Foods Markets for month now. Often times, when a flower of an orchid plant dies or breaks, the plant is no longer marketable to retail consumers and unfortunately, goes into the waste heap. What's amazing is, this Orchid is usually a perfectly healthy plant, ready to grow a set of new flowers. Thankfully, we have been able to successfully adopt these plants to be revitalized in a greenhouse setting.

We are thrilled to gift these rescued orchids to our hero healthcare workers who are risking their lives to rescue so many lives affected by COVID-19. We are grateful to Atlanta's Wholefoods Markets to participate and assist us in showing gratitude, appreciation and love to our hero healthcare worker angels. After the pandemic is over the orchid rescue will not stop, it will continue so we may gift and uplift also Hospice patients and seniors in senior homes. Our plan is then to collaborate with prisons and continue our orchid rescue greenhouse project as a means of rehabilitation, therapy and community outreach that is very much aligned with our mission.
